

A risky effort by members of the Colorado Mountain Club of Denver in ascending Bergschrund on the Tyndall Glacier in Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado, one of the forty peaks in that State more than 14,000 feet high.
Mile High Co.

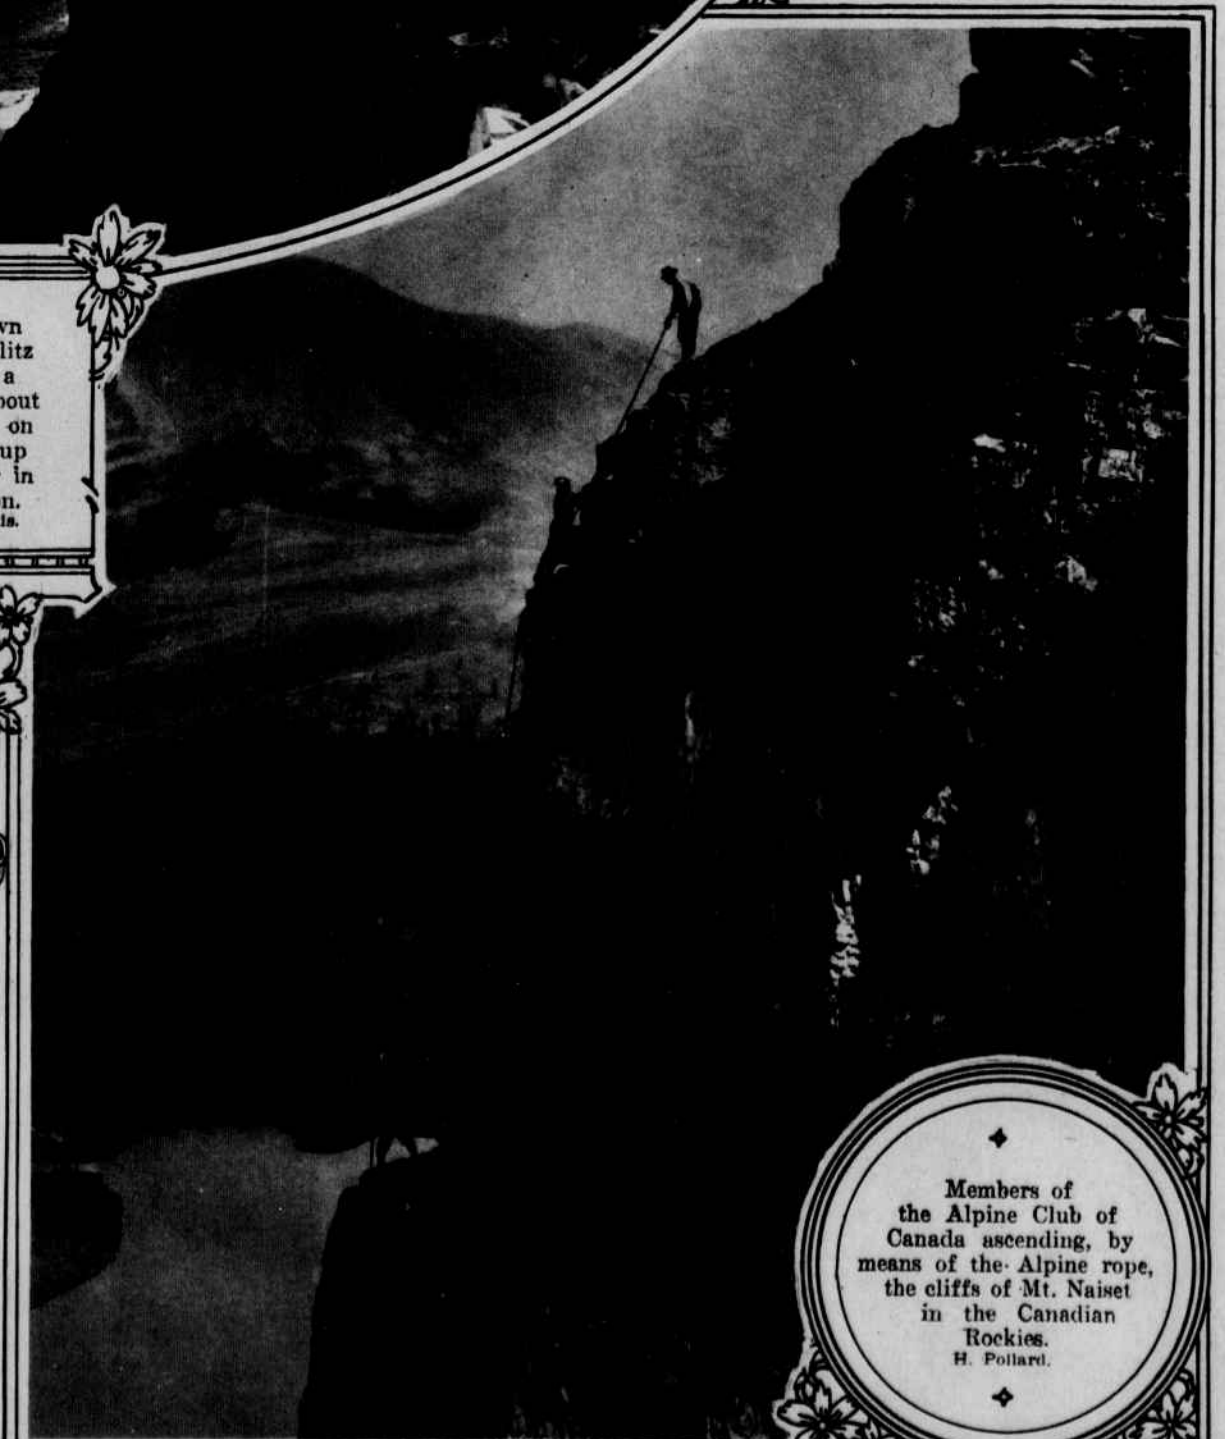

An unusual photo of a crevasse on the northern side of Mt. Baker, in Washington, near the Canadian border.
(c) Winter Photo Co.

Looking down on the Cowlitz Glacier at a height of about 12,000 feet on the way up Mt. Rainier in Washington.
Anabel Curtis.

Crossing a crevasse near the summit of Mt. Baker by means of a snow bridge.
Anabel Curtis.

Members of the Alpine Club of Canada ascending, by means of the Alpine rope, the cliffs of Mt. Naiset in the Canadian Rockies.
H. Pollard.